POETICAL.

The following from the Boston Post, is ASLEEP.

An hour before, she spoke of things That Memory to the dying brings, And kissed me all the while; Then, after some sweet parting words, She seem'd among her flowers and birds, Until she fell asleep.

'Twas Summer then, 'tis Autumn now; The crimson leaves fall off the bough, And strew the gravel sweep. I wander down the garden walk, And muse on all the happy talk We had beneath the limes; And, resting on the garden seat, Her old Newfoundland at my feet, I think of other times:

Of golden eves, when she and I Sat watching here the flushing sky, The sunset and the sea; Or heard the children in lanes, Following home the harvest swains, And shouting in their glee.

But when the daylight dies away, And ships grow dusky in the bay, These recollections cease; And in the stillness of the night, Bright thoughts that end in dreams as bright, Communicate their peace.

I wake and see the morning star, And hear the breakers on the bar, The voices on the shore; And then, with tears, I long to be Across a dim, unsounded sea, With her for evermore.

Seventh Volume.

THE August Number will contain splendid steel engravings of James Buchanan and John C. Breckinridge.

In addition to its political features, no exertion will be spared to make its Literary, Scientific and Miscellaneous Departments worthy of the old days of its fame.

The urgent demand for something in its character firm uniform, and reliable upon national questions, above the sectional squabbles of individuals, and always true to the great end of party organization - viz: the dissemination and support of the pure principles of National Democracy—affords a wide field of usefulness; and we rely upon

Political, literary, and miscellaneous in its contents, it presents a great variety of subjects, and treats all with a fullness of intelligence, a parity of style, and a vivacity of thought that rouders its pages at once fascinating and instructive. We advise all who desire to be fully informed upon passing events to subscribe for the Review. From the New York Day. Book. The Review is eminently conservative, and soundly orthodox in its democracy. It should be patronised by every thinking democrat in the Union.
